2007 – Michigan’s Year of Public Health June is “Reduce Your Risk” Month

Kingsford and Iron River, Michigan, June 5, 2007 – Ralph Waldo Emerson once wrote that “the greatest wealth is health.” Anyone who’s suffered with an illness or chronic disease knows the truth of these simple words.

The good news is that illnesses such as diabetes, asthma, cardiovascular disease, kidney disease, arthritis and osteoporosis can be prevented or minimized by eating healthy, exercising often, reducing stress and not smoking. The Dickinson-Iron District Health Department works daily to educate its citizens about these diseases and promote healthy lifestyles in order to save lives and, in terms of health-care costs, to also save dollars.

“We all understand the importance of keeping ourselves and our families healthy, which is a great motivator for prioritizing smart lifestyle choices,” said Kelly Rumpf, Health Educator. “But we may not think about the fact that an unhealthy population also impacts the bottom line in terms of the economy; we all pay the price when Michigan is not as healthy as it could, and should, be.”

The “Michigan Steps Up!” program (www.michiganstepsup.org) offers an interactive, online way to help citizens by providing tools for creating a personal health plan, recording daily achievements, updating weekly goals and completing a health-risk appraisal. The site is organized into sections geared specifically toward five different groups: People, Schools, Communities, Businesses and Health-Care Settings. The site includes healthy recipes, tips for staying in shape and staying motivated, how to order healthy at restaurants, and more.

“There are some really great ideas on the web site,” said Rumpf. “For example, I like the advice to ‘shop on the edge,’ which urges you to shop around the outer aisles of the store, where there are usually fresh vegetables, meats, eggs and dairy, and to avoid the inner aisles, which usually contain more expensive and less healthy processed foods.”

The environment in which we live also affects our health. The Michigan Department of Community Health (MDCH) recommends that each community, township, city or village have a Community Health Coalition, which can be a new launch or an expansion of an existing community group, as long as they include interdisciplinary representation from community leaders who can assist with supporting and implementing physical activity, nutrition, tobacco-free programs, policies and changes in the environment.

“If every community makes it easier to be physically active, eat healthfully and live tobacco-free lifestyles, Michigan would be a healthier place to live,” said Rumpf.

Rumpf stated, "Some organizations are integrating employee health as a business strategy that enables them to manage costs effectively, while investing in the potential of their human capital." Worksites interested in improving employee health and cutting healthcare costs, need to get on board with "Health Tracks," a new health and wellness program provided by the Dickinson-Iron District Health Department and tailored to meet the needs of local businesses to help reduce overall company healthcare expenditures. "Health Tracks" will increase awareness of and reduce behavioral risk factors which lead to cardiovascular disease and other chronic disease through health risk assessments and risk reduction services. For service fees and a tailored program for your employees call Rumpf at (906) 779-7234.

Governor Jennifer Granholm has declared 2007 to be the "Year of Public Health." Local health departments throughout the state will be focusing on a different health theme each month of the year in order to showcase the fact that public health agencies are always working to promote healthy lifestyles and to protect families and communities.
